

I'm not robot!

In this arcane-barrage, arcane-blast, arcane-brilliance, arcane-mage, arcane-missile, arcane-pvp-buils, arcane-pvp-talents, arcane-tree, best-mage-pvp-spec, feature, featured, features, i-hate-warlocks, joystick-features, mage, mage-column, mage-pvp-build, mage-pvp-guide, mage-pvp-spec, patch-3.1, patch-3.1.2, tweet-this, world-of-warcraft, wotlk, wow, wrath, wrath-of-the-lich-king Each week Arcane Brilliance comes to work totally motivated, ready to sit down and manufacture a fantastic, insightful, entertaining column about Mages. Then Arcane Brilliance's wife brings him breakfast, because she's awesome like that, and Arcane Brilliance takes a break to eat it. Fat and happy, Arcane Brilliance flexes its fingers and gets ready to resume the creative process. Then winamp shuffles through to a song from the new Silversun Pickups album and Arcane Brilliance gets distracted again, and has to listen to the whole album before it can concentrate. Then Arcane Brilliance's kids come in the room and Arcane Brilliance plays with them for awhile. Lunch approaches, and Arcane Brilliance needs to get the column up. And, that, loyal readers, is a preemptive apology for any inaccuracy, inconsistency, misspelling, and grammatical error that may follow this opening paragraph. Sorry!Before we begin, let's get a couple items out of the way.First: In case you haven't gotten it yet, or weren't aware, today is your last day to obtain Polymorph: Rabbit, at least during this calendar year. This is purchasable from the Noblearden vendors for the low, low price of 100 Noblearden Chocolates (it's only visible on the vendor if you're a Mage), which shouldn't take very long to obtain if you put your mind to it. Noblearden ends tonight at 11:59pm server time, so even if you have no interest in the rest of the holiday, don't miss out on this little Mage-only perk.Second: Images are no longer stupid! Yes, when the PTR for the 3.1.2 patch was live, the patch notes included a small note for Mages, but what note was. Your Mirror Images will now attack only the goal that you have generated the most hatred of, instead of pointing any bright object occurs in their fields of vision first. Besides, they won't break the CCs anymore when they feel they like it. I've tried this a little, and I'm happy to report that it seems to be working as an advertiser. Rejoice, my fellow Mages: our copies are no longer ham-fisted, drooling, mouth respirators. I'm dizzy. And with the news and notes out of the way, we are free to move on to this week's theme: PvPing as an Mage Arcane. Last week, we take a bit about how to start enlarging your Mage for PvP. From this week, we will take care of each of the three main specifications of Mage, and we will go through the unique ways to succeed with each of them in the various types of PvP found in the game. First we'll talk about Arcane Mages. Arcane Mages stand out in the treatment of constant explosion damage while remaining significantly mobile. With so many instant transmission options at your fingertips, Arcane Mages are able to run and gun like no other kind of Mage. Although their production of raw damage is not as high as Fire, and Frost Mages have them beaten in terms of pure survival, no one can hit and run like an Arcane Mage. Talents buildPoM/Pyro 57/14/0 This is an updated version of the classic PoM/Pyro built from the days of the years. Improved flicker will allow you to avoid some things, but only you're you're actually Blinking. Your instant-cast damage spells, from Arcane Barrage to Fire Blast to Presence of Mind+Arcane Blast/Pyroblast, allow you to fire them out on the fly, so don't waste the freedom this provides. Run around like a crazy person, Blinking when appropriate, Frost Novang and Slowing your opponents to keep them at bay, and pausing only to throw out the occasional Polymorph or Arcane Blast.Some other random tips: Line-of-sight is your friend. Seriously. Pillar-dance. Very few classes can do the whole "snipe from range then duck back behind cover" thing like an Arcane Mage. Your best spells are almost all instant, so use that to your advantage. And your best tool when your opponent tries to use LoS against you? Arcane Missiles. Once cast, it ignores LoS completely, meaning that if you can catch that Druid poking their head out from behind the crates long enough to hit your Arcane Missiles button, every missile will still hit them even if they drop out of sight before the first has left your hand. Buff up beforehand...no, really. When I say this, I mean go beyond the standard buffs. Every Mage will apply Arcane Intellect and an armor spell of their choice before heading into PvP, but especially in Arena, you need to put on more. Before that door opens, you want to apply the following to yourself and all of your teammates when possible: Slow Fall, Dampen Magic, Mana Shield, and, of course, Focus Magic on somebody who crlts a lot. Then make sure your teammates apply all of their useless buffs to you. Water Breathing? You betcha. Levitation? Indeed. You want everything, and here's why: every crappy buff on you is one more between the buffs you really need and whatever dispelling method the other team is employing. If you run up against another Mage, do you really want him Spellstealing your Arcane Power, or would you rather he ended up with your Slow Fall? Yeah, me too.Unless I'm falling off the ledge at Wood mill in the Arathi basin at that time. Then he can totally have my arcane power. When things get diffes, the hard run away and hide as ninis. The prismaic layer provides instant invisibility, but it breaks easily. The ice block solves this problem. Eliminate any point that may affect it, effectively cleaning all the things that may break your invisibility prematurely. He strongly encouraged to configure a macro that links his cast of invisibility to cancel his ice block aura, so that the moment he wants can be invisible. Once you have done that, find a place to evoke. The evocation glyph is an absolute necessity for PVP magicians, since it is really the only way to recover manages and health without help. If you have á © xito with this, it has effectively restored, which can be increasingly discouraging for the other team. Patch 3.1 changed the way the impact works, so it is something that can control instead of a random process. This means that it will happen less frequently, but now you can count on it as an interruption of CC/spell and use it when the situation requests it. You already have one of the best anti-COSTER spells of the game in the game in Counterspell, but combines that with a well-struck fire/impact, and you can almost pretend that you are a pácaro or something like that. With the impact linked to one of your spell spell Have it available because when that paladm is about to light 10% to 100% and its counterattack is still in the time of reuse. Absorb spells as often as you can. The absorbing of the incarcario is a talent If used with skill and patience, you can change the course of a coincidence completely. Pay attention to the types of magic that hit you and try to absorb as much as possible ward spells. Though the mana lost by using Mana Shield is a problem, the spellpower granted by absorbing a bit of damage with it can be significant. If you have a Priest on the team who can Power Word: Shield you, make sure you let them know how awesome it can make you, and then make sure you bake them cookies or send them a fancy e-card or something. Maybe slip some gold in with the next batch of Strudels you conjure for them. I don't know.Judicious use of your various damage absorbing options can make you a powerhouse for a good portion of your fight, so make sure you get the most out of Incanter's Absorption. Imagine, if you will, a fight against a Warlock that goes like this:Between your Mana Shield, a timely Fire Ward, and your Priest teammate's Power Word: Shield, you manage to increase your spellpower by the maximum allowed by the talent: 600. You do this without taking any significant damage. You hit your 1-Win macro button, triggering Presence of Mind, your spellpower trinket, and Arcane Blast. Your spellpower is now increased by an extra 440, and you've got the Arcane Blast buff, which will increase the damage done by your next spell by 15%. Missile Barrage procs. You trigger Arcane Power, increasing the damage of your spells by another 20%, and fire off Arcane Missiles at the same time. Your effective spellpower on this spell --if your normal spellpower is, say, 2k--is 3,040, and the spell itself will do 35% more damage than it ordinarily would do. Let's say, just for fun, that Clearcasting, and thus Arcane Potency, also proc. Each of the five missiles that now issue forth from your extended fingers at the Warlock will do something like 2k damage on a normal hit, and crit for like 3k.In the space of 3 seconds or so, and with two button presses (assuming the right macros are in place), you've just done something in the neighborhood of 15k damage. Feel free to imagine even more things, like that you've to request the War Clock Slow, and its spells against it are doing an additional 12% damage thanks to the Weak Storm, or that the game simply could not keep up with all the awesomeness you just introduced on the server, and the game code is broken down, causing the World foundations of Warcraft to tremble. Somewhere within the Blizzard/Activision headquarters, a solitary gaming designer looks from his computer screen and starts crying openly, though he doesn't know exactly why. Are you in the background? Incanter Absorption can be impressive, if you know how to use it. Besides, killing Warlocks is so much fun. Now that this 1000-word column is quickly approaching 2,000 words, I better wrap it up. Arcane PvP Mages out there, what other tips do you have? Every week Arcane Brilliance teleports you into the wonderful world of Mages and then throws you a ball of fire in your face. Take a look at our recent guide to enlarge your Mage for Naxxramas, or our look at some ideas for the double observation of your Mage. Until next week, keep Mage training around.
